The article is a review of data showing how spiroplasma fits an infectious disease model of TSE. One photo shows that spiroplasma are seen by electron microscopy as 40 nanometer filaments, which is substantially smaller than a Herpes virus (120 nanometers). It is noteworthy that an electron microscopic study of experimental scrapie in mouse brain revealed identical inclusions.